NEW PLUGIN RELEASE: COREACTIVITY

Plugin for tracking and logging website events and activities

Niš, Serbia, September 6, 2023. Dev4Press announced the release of a new plugin for WordPress: CoreActivity. This is a free plugin, with no plans for having Pro version, and all future updates and new features will be a part of the free plugin. This plugin aims to log various events and activities on WordPress-powered websites and provide an easy way to review, filter, and analyze logs. Activities are logged in the database tables. Currently, in version 1.0, the plugin includes support for 27 components and 117 events. Some components depend on specific conditions (multisite network use) or third-party plugins.

The screenshot displays the CoreActivity plugin dashboard. At the top, there's a navigation bar with 'Overview' selected, and two user profile cards. The main content area is divided into three sections: 'Components and Events', 'Database Statistics', and 'Last 30 days statistics'. The 'Components and Events' section shows 13 available components (24 total registered) and 65 available events (56 enabled, 121 total registered). It also features a toggle for 'Events Logging' which is currently 'Active'. The 'Database Statistics' section provides details on 3 database tables, log range (82 days), log size (800 KB), and metadata (3157 rows, 13.72 MB). The 'Last 30 days statistics' section lists various event categories and their counts.
